YOUR STARTING POINT

Every political movement has some particular starting point on which its whole political analysis and subsequent policy is based. Such starting points can be a nations defence, an alliance, the general or average social condition of the country, etc. Whatever starting point is selected it will have a profound effect on the political development of the movement concerned.

As National Democrats our starting point can only be the contradictions that exist in our society. We bare our political outlook on the living conditions under which most of the people live. Our starting point is not the abstract condition of a party or a Government or a country but the condition of life of the majority of ordinary people. We believe that we would fail as a party unless we concern ourselves with the social realities in day-to-day living, in income, in poverty, in social relations at work, in education and in housing.

We believe that logical expansion from this starting point commits N.D.P. to the establishment of a 32 county republic in which the wealth and resources of the country are mobilized to meet the needs and aspirations of the people themselves.

The elaboration and fulfilment of these ideals needs the involvement of the people themselves. This means you.
