SINN FEIN is an open and revolutionary political party dedicated to the re-unification of Ireland and the establishment of true Irish freedom.

Besides confronting the evils of British rule in the 6 Counties and the assistance given to that rule by successive governments in Dublin, Sinn Fein has policies on a wide range of social, economic and political issues. These range from the impact of EEC policies on Irish small farmers to the effects of social service cutbacks on the underprivileged, and from local government reform to support for nuclear disarmament.

We deplore the fact that financial resources are squandered each year for the upkeep of Britain's border and believe that those resources should be used to create jobs, build houses, hospitals and schools, and help to relieve the problems caused by social deprivation in our towns and cities.

Believing that the freedom of Ireland must include the liberation of the people of Ireland from economic and social inequality, Sinn Fein advocates a socialist programme which positively discriminates in favour of the disadvantaged sections of society.

Sinn Fein has a proven commitment to the restoration of the Irish language and the promotion of all aspects of Gaelic culture is a major element in our programme.

Membership of Sinn Fein is open to men and women, 16 years and over, who subscribe to the objectives outlined above.
