

Residents of Andersonstown

The events of recent weeks and of past months in Belfast and the North compel us all to come to the conclusion that the danger to our community is far from ended. The renewal of violence should be apparent to all, but we find that our people in this area seem to ignore these signs of trouble, hoping that it will not affect them.

The volunteers of the Irish Republican Army are actively engaged in preparation for the defence of the area in the event of possible attack upon it.

While we gratefully acknowledge thanks to those who helped in the past and are still working to aid us, we take this opportunity to ask those who are considerate of our people's plight to give us their aid for the protection of their homes, families, churches and schools.

We require men, equipment and finance to do this. With these and God's help, the continued support of the people, we can build a nation where Irishmen will be free from intimidation and bigotry.
